REDEFINING PURPOSE

CORRECTING THE FALSE NARRATIVE AROUND DEFINING YOUR LIFE'S PURPOSE

By Isaiah-Phillips Akintola

PRESSING TOWARD MATURITY

Psalm 36:8

For with you is the fountain of life;
in your light we see light

INTRODUCTION

The reality is, many are aware of a sense of an assignment upon their lives, but the challenge is, very few know the assignment, or are just utterly confused on how to locate it. And for those who have to some degree located and even start to function in what they believe is their purpose in life, suddenly become disorientated, fearful, or insecure when they are removed from what they are used to doing, or suddenly get shifted to another area of life or ministry that seem completely different to what they thought was their CenterPoint of purpose and destiny.

Many in the body of Christ do not understand that purpose is dynamic and progressive in nature; it works with the various realities of the seasons and the dealings of the father in our lives even as we grow and mature in his kingdom. Our life's purpose is not a onetime assignment, nor is it a permanent ministry structure we build a monument of a sense of arrival around as many have unfortunately been wrongly taught.

Purpose through the light of the Spirit is alive in nature, and its journeying with the voice and direction of the father for us even as we are guided through the new pathway and highways of his Spirit according to his ordained timing and the prophetic program for us.

Secondly, no parent gets to decide your birth or purpose; they are but an instrument in the hands of the father to bring you into this world where you get to fulfill your assignment. Some parents are very aware of the father's plan for their children due to their close relationship with the father's divine intention, while other parents are completely clueless and void of truth and the wisdom to raise up their children in the ways of divine destiny. Even in this seemingly terrible dysfunctional foundation, the father's brilliant plan and purpose for you still stand firm and undeterred.

The father will usually place people within our space in helping us to develop our spiritman in discerning the ways of divine guidance and direction, but no one, including your husband, pastor, prophet, or apostle has been given such power or authority to pinpoint your purpose and assignment in life. That's an exclusive ministry mandate from Christ alone who is called the way, the truth, and the life who enlightens your heart into all truth and purposes.

Regrettably, lots of folks have been indirectly derailed in their honest desire to locate their life's purpose through the wrong relationships they surround themselves, particularly in the matters of spiritual directions. It is my desire through this article to try to address this seemingly illusive issue.

REDISCOVERING THE ORGANOGRAM

This is the day of redefinition, consolidation, and increased spiritual insight in order to corporately enter the realm of matured kingdom life. Maturity, however, in divine things requires accuracy, soundness of truth, and clear application of revelation in the character lifestyle of an ascended wisdom in humility.

Many of the initial spiritual things and truths that were restored, and later misrepresented in the late 80s and early 90s are currently being corrected and realigned to their rightful position of purpose and function, so the ecclesia can effectively and productively reflect the very image and likeness of her assignment in the earth.

This explains why many of the current apostolic activities of the father within his church today tends to emphasize more on correcting doctrinal errors than the favored position of manifestation of what can be termed as the power gift ministry. Please, don't get me wrong, there's absolutely nothing wrong in the manifestation of the ministry of miracles, signs, and wonders, after all, these gifts are given for the beneficiation and profiting of the Body of Christ and creation.

I personally believe the church is yet to witness the eternal purpose of the demonstration of the miraculous hand of the father in the earth. Yet, I know we are entering that season where there's going to be a matured alignment and operation of the entire ascended ministry gifts for the perfecting of the Saints as we await the arrival of our Lord Jesus Christ back to earth.

However, we first need to precisely respond to the present demand of the father in correcting the lies, deceit, and the extremes that have brought the Body of Christ into disrepute and redundancy, and one of those extremes is the wrong narrative that has beclouded the precise understanding of what constitute the operation of individual's purpose in life.

This is a topic I know is troubling many within the body of Christ, and it accounts for the reason why many are either no longer attending church gatherings or have gone the way of the current New Age yoga, meditation frenzy, we now see across America and Europe in seeking for alternative means in finding what they believe is their reason for existence.

There are lots of individuals who are literally afraid of leaving this earth merely because they are not sure if they are fulfilling the very reason why they've been sent to this earth. The fear of not being certain that you are in the place where the father has ordained for you, or that you're carrying out the assignment you've been ordained for is a major challenge across the globe today, and I personally think we need to address this issue once and for all so that people can be liberated in their persuasion of purpose.

Indeed, ignorance, the lack of insight and understanding can bring destruction as the word of God declares, but if we give our hearts to divine understanding, and allow the Spirit of knowledge and wisdom to guide our pathway in the matters of truth, I am sure we will arrive at the place of divine rest in our journey through life.

I believe you've had this saying that you need to find your purpose in order to find fulfillment in life, and that's a fact, in identifying purpose lies your joy and contentment in life. I could still remember as a young adult how desperate and driven I was to locate my purpose just before heading for the Bible school.

When the whole idea of purpose was reawakened and presented to the mainstream church back then in the late 80s under the banner of the faith and prosperity movement, it was as if 'purpose' was some kind of treasured commodity; a hidden jewel if you wish, or some elusive pathway that takes a certain spiritual specialist to assist us discover.

Most Christian book shops back then were besieged with authors coming up with various versions and steps to discovering purpose and destiny. Books from people like Kenneth Copland, Mike Murdock, the late Benson Idahosa, Rick Warren, the late Dr Myles Munroe, and many others become the Magna Carta of many church leaders, particularly here in Africa. I could still remember reading the book titled plan, purpose, and pursuits by the late Kenneth Hagin in my quest to be firmly established in what I believe was my ministry purpose.

These were a few of the authors who laid the foundational framework of what many charismatic Pentecostal circles are doing today, especially in the sphere of church building ministry and leadership training, particularly in the discovery of purpose.

I must say, reading some of these books actually helped me to some degree in relating and claiming the blessings of discovering what the word of God defines as purpose, even then, the realization of a lingering sense of emptiness and disconnection within me led me to begin to probe and question many things I will usually consume as spiritual truth.

As I continued to dig deep in examining what the word of God says in terms of my own relationship and heart condition towards life, and the seeming complexity of understanding my purpose, I realized the missing piece; and this missing piece is primarily around the wrong context in which purpose was defined and presented to people, which invariably made it highly difficult for anyone to accept or relate to.

DAVID, OUR PATTERN

Many are familiar with the life story of David, however very few have actually examined David's life as a symbolic, prophetic pattern that unveils how to locate and accomplish one's purpose. I have always been fascinated by David's life, and the value system that drives his philosophy of existence. Looking at his life from a teenage shepherd boy who later in life became the king of Israel is a beautiful concept of understanding the progressive principle of fulfilling purpose.

As I have earlier explained that purpose is progressive in nature, and the life of David and many other icons in the word of God attest to this truth. Every aspect of David's life, from his Age as a teenager, to his creative art skill, battle, victory, and even mistakes and later defeat, were all divinely woven together in speaking directly to the latter-day Saints on the matters of the required character lifestyle in carrying out our assigned, seasonal purposes. Here are some interesting highlights to consider about the progressive nature of purpose in the life of David:

- 1. He was a shepherd boy
- 2. He was a skillful harp player and a psalmist
- 3. He was a warrior and a commander in the army
- 4. He was a prophet and a priest
- 5. He eventually became the king of Israel

While many of these highlighted points may not have happened intentionally, they all however had a divine, progressive role in the unveiling of the father's plan and purpose for David until he finally got to that place of him becoming the King of Israel. As we can see that each of these qualities in the life of David are all interconnected in unveiling the next phase of the prophetic plan of the father for David.

In other words, everything that David knew was eternally ordained for him as the right package to prepare him for that grand assignment in destiny. David was not born into a royal household that groomed him as a prince that will one day become a king. He was a shepherd boy who was passionate about his father's sheep to the point that he was willing to risk his own life in fighting a lion and a bear to save his father's lamb and sheep. Yet, his passion as a shepherd prepared his leadership spirit in being accountable and responsible even to the point of defending what was placed under his care.

This was a powerful leadership character that will be later useful throughout the rest of his ministry career. I discovered that many are dreaming of becoming the next commander or king of Israel without willing to first become a shepherd boy.

When we despise and reject the days of small beginnings, we also defer our day of entering the greater realm of the fulfillment of purpose. The things of the Spirit, particularly relating to the fulfillment of destiny are usually progressive in nature. When we are not faithful in seemingly little things we will not be committed with bigger ministry kingdom assignment.

THE TWO PERSPECTIVES THAT GUIDES MOST PEOPLE'S SPIRITUALITY

In dealing with matters of divine truth, are two basic ways you can either approach them; the first approach is to examine it from a man's perspective, then relaying it back towards the direction of God, or you can approach it from God's eternal standpoint, and then relay it back to man's world. Whichever direction we prefer to approach spiritual laws or revelation, will not only affect our perspective and discernment, but will also define our approach of attitude and response to the challenges of life.

Whatever truth or spiritual reality is approached from man's perspective, regardless of how imposing and profound such truth may sound to the hearings of men, are often from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. Viewing life from the ascended throne room of the father is speaking of the wisdom that comes from above, and this wisdom will always challenge the best of religious philosophy and the intellectual perspectives of men. It is the eternal desire of Christ that we approach our lives and the things of the earth from the lens view of the creator himself, so we may cooperate with the unfolding pathway wisdom may guide us through in the fulfillment of our unique purposes.

When we ascend on high and look at the whole structure of life and creation from within the holiest of holy view lens, we will not only discover how things are eternally arranged and designed to function, we will also be invited to participate within that ascended culture and wisdom of divine existence, even in the matters of purpose and destiny.

This is a powerful truth that can completely turn your philosophy of life, family, and ministry upside down, but will leave you reformed, transformed, and ultimately restored back to the divine pattern of existence.

When powerful spiritual principles and value standard are turned as an instrument man uses to build and further his own objective in the name of serving the purpose of the father, such truth becomes a weapon in the hand of the enemy to corrupt the hearts of men, pervert justice, and even hinder others from coming into the arena of divine light that ought to bring lasting freedom. Think for a minute how the illegitimate churches and their leadership have contaminated the whole idea of purpose to justify control and intimidate the people of God from discovering themselves in the light of biblical truth.

Many church leaders, including some that I know very well have turned their members to some form of beast of burden in the name of serving some purpose, created by the pyramid leadership system that enslaves the people of God. How many pastors have wrongly placed titles and position upon the lives of their members in the name of being shown what is the calling and purpose of those church members.

I have heard of certain guys who call themselves apostles and Bishops who travel from place to place, anointing and ordaining folks into ministry and fivefold offices just to merely increase the numbers of followers to their illegitimate apostolic or so-called prophetic networks.

There are countless numbers of saints within churches today serving, yet not happy or fulfilled because their pastors, prophets or Apostle believed that their position of service in the church is there called, ordained, position of assignment in life. Yet, we know that these individuals were placed in those pastoral or leadership positions not because they've been called by God to those areas, but because of certain financial resource, talents or gift those individuals have.

To make this false narrative of locating purpose more difficult for folks back then, we were told, we've got to fully serve our local assembly with everything we've got which many of us did, only to later discover that the motivation of the call itself carried a wrong motivation and agenda to manipulate and control the people. In fact, the whole exercise served as a major distraction and diversion, designed by the enemy to indirectly derail many from the true pathway of accelerating in the ordained plan of the father.

let me clarify what I have said, I did not say saints are not to interact or serve the church and one another. On the contrary, it is through selflessness kingdom service that you and I get to understand what divine purpose mean. The reality is, 60% of the things I know today came from my position of service both from the personal and corporate order of the Church.

What I am saying is, when you use the legitimate concept of spiritual service and leadership to try to circumvent or manipulate people's loyalty, in the guise of grooming them to find their purpose or destiny, we become a powerful tool in the hands of Satan himself in derailing the advancement of the kingdom of God. The truth is, nobody needs to go on some goose chase of trying to find their purpose of existence if there's a clear insight and a well-built spiritual footing and understanding of how the father divinely designed the [functional] operation of life.

What do I mean by this? Every facet of your being was designed to respond in divine attraction to your ordained, designed purpose. From the day you were born into this world, regardless of how or where you were born, your life as consistently gravitated either directly or indirectly towards the fulfillment of its original, progressive assignment, and that's a powerful truth you should not lose sight of.

Your purpose is a simple yet a complex construction of your very existence in life. Complex because of the diverse dynamics of your birth and environmental influence. Complex, because of the incidence and even accidents that sought to change your values, perception and trust when it comes to your identity.

It is significant to note that our purpose is stepping into the arena of creative leadership possibilities that by default are made up of numbers of core wiring values, that are designed to function together in order to find peace and rest as we take that step of initiative in what you've been designed to carry out for such a season in time. Let's remember that purpose is progressive and not static.

Another point we need to take to heart is, your purpose is not some future thing you're aiming to achieve in determining your success; your purpose is locating who you are in Christ, and where he has ordained you to be in the now of your position in him.

Because Christ life is the light of men, we become illuminated particularly in the area, he will want us to function when we allow is life to reside in us, and such spiritual reality begins to point or motivate us towards a specific direction of life productivity that brings satisfaction to us. Finding that creative, resourceful imprint of Christ light in us releases the grace of wisdom so you may increase in the improvement of that seasonal purpose you've been invited to share with Christ.

What am I saying, we all have certain default characteristics that make us see and respond to life and its various challenges in a peculiar manner, but if we allow ourselves to develop in relationship with the father on a daily basis, we will end up fulfilling his purpose effortlessly.

Whether we are Christians or non-Christians, God created us as humans to function in various fields that speak productivity and harmony to the rest of creation. In other words, our life is one big ecosystem that helps others to function and succeed in their assignment.

Indeed, when we give our hearts to the Lord and our dead spiritman becomes alive again in Christ, we have a better insight and a greater advantage to naturally see into our position of strength and grace in the art of understanding and fulfilling purpose.

From the very day we came into this world we've been responding to purpose directly or indirectly even when the enemy tries to put stumbling blocks across our pathway, we've never stopped to fulfill our purpose.

What we need to understand is, are we aware that our life is daily designed to move towards our ordained purpose. To merely go to work, earn good money, live in the best places in town, travel across the world, have the best of what money can buy, get married to your so-called dream husband or wife, have children, attend church and be morally good without understanding the purpose behind those things which only comes through your close walk with Christ is to end up frustrated even as a minister of the gospel.

May I be bold enough to inform you that purpose is what defines our life's existence; your joy, trouble, battles, fear, needs are all reflection of your purpose. Who you choose to marry, the kind of children the Lord gives to you, are all part of the package that comes with your purpose.

The environment you live in either classic or shark is every much a factor into your ordained purpose in life. Your education, qualification, skill either in management or leadership cannot be divorced from your purpose. Many are cut up with searching for joy and fulfillment in life without understanding that what they need to be finding out is what has been included in their purpose package.

Your joy is attached to how you perceive and understand the reality of your purpose. Your location and ultimate relocation will eventually be determined by how you follow the voice of the father in the fulfillment of your life's purpose. Your entire life is determined by your purpose, and as I have earlier said, purpose is progressive and not a one-time bus stop.

It is vital to realize that one easy way to start dealing with the embedded, inner most hurts of our lives is to learn to find someone we can trust, and in most cases, trusting people, at least, the folks you think you can trust will require that you become vulnerable in opening your heart to share your own story. It is rather a shame and disappointing to say the least, that only a hand full in the body of Christ today have actually had the sacred space and opportunity to honestly and opening share their life story unscripted, and when they do, we make they feel condemned just because we don't know how to handle complex human issues.

The fact is, there's nothing closer to us than the very essence of our purpose, though you may not initially appreciate or acknowledge it. We are daily confronted with issues calling us to lend a helping hand. We are regularly faced with circumstances we know deep within us, we have the answer, but we will not respond because we are fixative to our own battles, inadequacies, fear and the issue of acceptance.

The wrong images and identity that has been created around us has continued to cripple us from rising up to the task we know we are able to resolve. Secondly, some of the wrong teachings we have listened to in the past relating to purpose have also created another sense of fear, inability, or a need for certain individual or group to give us approval before we can confidently step into the arena of fulfilling what we believe will give us satisfaction and spiritual fulfillment.

When the idea of your purpose of existence is presented as something hidden in some maze you're trying so hard to find, or you find yourself locked within the false narrative that God deliberately hides away your key to fulfillment because he desires you to pay penitence in journeying to locating it, you must realize that this is far from the truth.

The father is not some taskmaster who takes delight in your pain, in order to prove your commitment and worthiness to receive or hear from him. Unfortunately, these are some of the few wrong mindsets I grew up and am sure that am not the only one who was almost damaged with this wrong, perverted narrative of what many termed as purpose. I am sure that by now you've noticed that I have not used the term destiny as interchange to purpose because destiny and purpose are two different things though they sound similar.

Destiney is what the father preordained for all his children before they were born to this world. Purpose on the other hand, is that aspect of your being wired to interact and respond to the simplest and the more complex realities of your environment, in a manner that unleashes your creative-leadership spirit which then produces the light of God's truth and will to that particular area of life's need.

Destiny is the pathway your life's purpose follows, which eventually leads you to the father's ultimate destination for your life. Following your pathway to purpose starts with being responsive to those little nudges that attracts your intercession and compassion. It begins with how deeply you're touched when you see people in need, and you feel or even wish you can help.

It starts with a deep sense of listening to what people are not saying in their conversation, you may be able hear they're needs cry out, you may feel their pain, and even see their fears, or might gain insight into their potential possibilities, and this is all wonderful. But purpose the primary aim of your life's purpose is not just about meeting the needs of men as wonderful and highly critical as they are. The essence of your life's purpose is knowing and meeting the needs of your heavenly father's heart.

It's about seeking to know his mind in all things and for all things; it's about spending quality time talking to him and waiting patiently to listen to his respond back to you. Your purpose is about learning his ways and desire for his creation primarily through his word.

It's about standing for the truth when everyone is falling towards the pathway of compromise. It's about being his voice to the voiceless; it's about been his eyes to the blind. Whatever form of purpose you sense for life starts with the heart of profound compassion, but you can seldom develop compassion in a world of pain and cruelty without responding to the ministry of prayer and intercession.

Its in the place of intercession the father begins to reveal his heart to us; that's the place he shares his deep secrets with us. That's the place you receive the love to feel, and the resource and strategy to help, and most importantly, that's the place you receive your deployment marching order

Purpose gravitate towards the ultimate fulfillment of a destiny. In this note, I'll rather want us to focus on purpose for the mere fact, there's still a lot of confusion and misrepresentation around it. I would like us to carefully examine the mind of Christ in relating to what purpose is, so there can a balanced insight and understanding.

Please not again, I have not suggested that locating divine things come easy or cheap, what I am saying is a false representation of the ways of the Lord can cause people to end up disappointed and frustrated. Or when we misrepresent the principles and values of the kingdom, we derail the objective of the father in the lives of people. Due to the nature of the days we're in, we cannot afford to miss up people's lives and time in the name of serving God. its time people know the truth and the spiritual patterns and blueprint ordained for them to live and successful live here on earth, particularly relating to what purpose is all about.

The reality is, there's nothing closer to you than your purpose of existence. In fact, it is closer to you than your very breath if you understand and pursue the central reason of your regeneration and restoration back to the father of light. Meaning that anyone who is truly rebirth in the Spirit of Christ should not find it difficult to discover and connect to the very essence of their existence. The moment a person gets to be spiritually alive, the activity that awakens the gravitation towards the fulfillment of purpose increases exponentially.

It is, however, equally necessary to understand that there's a divine pathway required to connect with your purpose, which comes primarily through one's intimate relationship and obedience to the voice of the Spirit of God. While it is true that your purpose is a breath away from you, it is likewise true and critical to note that entering the scope of your purpose can also be a lifetime journey of adjustments, change, and a total rediscovery of your biblical, spiritual perception and value system.

Please continue to follow my trend of thought, I am heading somewhere I don't want you to miss. It took me years to arrive at this point of ascended truth, and I don't want you to take other decades for you to arrive at this position of truth.

The reality is, the millennials who are my primary audience don't have the luxury of another decade to play around with important kingdom principle. Every moment of acknowledging restored truth and revelational knowledge of the kingdom of God is an advantage to press further into the realities of God's prophetic agenda for this third day.

Friends, truth and its wisdom of understanding and application is locked within your spirit man. However, the soul also carries a large number of what I'll like to call fragmented truth; in other words, truth that are not holistic, meaning that they are incomplete. Facts are good, but they are not the truth.

To know truth about any area of life, including what constitute a sound revelation of purpose, you need to have a sound spiritual foundation. And when you have a sound and a strong spirit, you will need to bring the faculties of your soul into alignment with your spirit, so they can be in agreement.

For as long as the soul and the spirit are not in agreement, it will always create a conflict of interest and understanding within you in relating to what to believe and accept in the matter of purpose and destiny.

I once asked myself this question, what is the space distance between my soul and spirit? If you're a student of the word of God, you must have read in the book of Hebrews chapter 4 that the spirit and soul are so keenly connected that it will only take the sword of the Spirit which is the word of God to be able to perfectly divide them for clear identification.

Yet, to close the distance between these realities through the misguided ideals and wrong desires, we've accumulated and allowed society to build within our hearts for decades can actually take a whole lifetime. My take is, we can actually define purpose by what we know and have discovered within the myopic world of our soul lens view without the correct spiritual alignment in agreement with the knowledge of the spiritman.

IN HIS LIGHT WE SEE LIGHT

The scripture above gives a definite insight into how we are to enter the realm of discovering our purpose, and of course is through the light we have discovered and experienced in the Father. It is through his light that we see light. The light of our purpose is hidden within our ability to be found in Christ.

This point of connecting our entire being in the illuminating [revelation] light of the father, which disperses every form of darkness and confusion within us, allows the space to see him for who he is, and gives us a brilliant opportunity to see ourselves through the eyes of his will and desire for us. It is at this point that we can begin to say that we've been connected to the father's heart, which holds the key that unlocks our progressive desire for him.

The more the father's light illuminates our inner life through call to walk with him, the more we are exposed to his [light] truth, and the more we are able to keenly see his will and plan for us at every given interval or season in our journey with him. Our purpose in life is not a onetime call in fulfilling a lifetime assignment. Your purpose is a progressive journey of the unveiling of the minds of the father for you as you walk with him a daily basis.

How many times we have seen a vision or had a dream and we become so convinced about what we have seen as our lifetime assignment? If I look back at the visions I have received from the Lord and how those visions and dreams have grown and developed from that initial stage of what I thought was my assignment to where I am now in the fulfillment of the father's intended will, it is just unfathomable.

Your purpose is an unfolding reality to share in the burden and the desire of the father. Divine purpose is never static nor can you point a finger to say that's my eternal purpose for life. There's no such thing like that in the entire bible. When we develop a heart to pursue the father's heart, and chose to honor him through our devotion, we will be invited to share in the fulfillment of his prophetic intentions, and that may take a moment, an hour, a day, a week, a month, a year, or decade.

Your purpose is connected to the prophetic seasons of God in the earth, and as you and I understand this, we become his vessels of honor whenever he needs to deploy his representatives on earth. To burden your heart in searching for a peculiar objective called purpose is not to have a true understanding of the ways of the Father, and perhaps is also a reflection of a deep sense of insecurity. I have discovered that many will rather find and define their security in some grand project they are carrying out for the Lord than being secured in walking with the Lord.

Those who have truly learnt to walk with the Lord are they the ones actually working with the father. If your search for fulfillment in a purposeful objective is merely determined by some big achievement, I can bet you that the day such assignment is taken from you, or you're suddenly redeployed somewhere, you will go into depression.

How many pastors and spiritual leaders today are having sleepless night not because they are burdened with the desire of the father's heart, but because they are losing members, or they are sensing they need to leave behind what they've spent twenty years of their lives building? Our purpose is not a destination, or some life time job description as it has been erroneously defined by many. A true kingdom driven purpose is rather a journey towards the place of the father's pleasure as we work in obedience to his voice and will.

Friends, the context and platform of our search for purpose must be precisely aligned with the divine, prophetic narrative and objective of the father for us individually. Unfortunately, many of our leaders and churches do not have the right, foundational, spiritual value and perspective towards the essence of life and existence, therefore, their whole idea of purpose is completely wrong and misrepresenting, even when they seem to be quoting the right scripture to back up their wrong narrative.

You will agree with me that many who have taken up the challenge of seeking and searching for their purpose through this wrong narrative we have presented in our churches has led countless numbers of souls to the position of disappointments and frustration, as they continue to serve under a system that enslaves them in the name of connecting them to their assigned purpose.

As I carefully consider this matter of finding purpose, which today's one of the bestselling points of the marketplace business target, I realized how far many are willing to go, and indirectly be led astray in the name of trying to find the reason for living. Finding the essence of existence is something every human cannot avoid regardless of how they try.

One of the wirings of human being is not merely to just understand meaning, but to also give and receive meaning. Where we lack the sense of meaning or purpose, we express dissatisfaction, disappointment, frustration, and even depression to some degree that may lead to suicide in some extreme cases. People can literally take their very own life for the lack of connecting with authentic purpose in life.

The drive for meaning and purpose is so powerful that it gives us a closure even in the loss of a very close loved one. Not understanding purpose is a powerful weapon in the hand of the enemy to destroy a person, family, community, or even a nation as we can see today. This indeed explains why online, motivational coaching communities are becoming a prime spot; a multi-billion-dollar business hub, many are investing in today.

You must have heard the statement, you need to look inward to find your purpose, that may be a half truth. But certainly not the whole truth, because you know as I know that what is hidden down within most of us are the dark realities of our past that we hate to hear or talk about. Many are struggling in developing the muscle of trust to open those dark realms of our souls to others in the name of searching for purpose due to their experience or what they've had
